CONFUSING CELLPHONE DRIVING RESTRICTIONS COULD GET STATEWIDE MANDATE

Chicago Tribune

Drivers forced to navigate a confusing patchwork of cellphone restrictions in the Chicago area no longer will have to wonder whether they are breaking the law if Gov. Quinn signs a sweeping ban on hand-held devices.

Coming four years after a statewide ban on texting and driving, the new law would require motorists to keep both hands free while using a cellphone or risk a $75 fine.

For those accustomed to having a cellphone stuck to an ear while driving, it hasn't been easy knowing where it's legal to gab away. A Tribune survey last year of 270 municipalities showed that 76 had an ordinance governing when and how motorists could use their cellphones.

The law approved by both the House and Senate on Tuesday would provide some much-needed clarity on the issue, said State Rep. John D'Amico (D-Chicago), who has championed the issue for years.

"We're still allowing you to have a conversation; just have it over the hands-free device," he said.

Motorists would be allowed to use a hand-held phone only for emergencies, and the $75 fine would be imposed for a first offense. Each subsequent violation would be more expensive and become part of the motorist's state driving record.

Although D'Amico expressed optimism

ON THE CASINO FRONT ...

Efforts to expand Illinois casino gambling are losing ground at the Capitol as the plan's new sponsor clashes with Gov. Quinn while Cook County Board President Toni Preckwinkle angles for a piece of the action. The gambling bill includes new casinos for Chicago and four other towns plus slot machines at horse racing tracks. The governor's hand-picked chief gambling regulator, Aaron Jaffe, the Illinois Gaming Board chairman, criticized the bill Tuesday as trying to do too much.

“We're still allowing you to have a conversation; just have it over the hands-free device.”

—Rep. John D'Amico (D-Chicago), who favors a ban on hand-held devices that the governor would authorize the statewide hand-held ban for drivers, Quinn spokesman Dave Blanchette said the governor “took no stance” on the bill.

“The governor,” he added, “intends to thoroughly review the bill once it reaches his desk.”

Eleven states already have authorized bans on drivers' use of hand-held cellphones, and Illinois' proposal has the support of The Governors Highway Safety Association, Deputy Executive Director Jonathan Adkins said Wednesday.

In the past, the association has been less supportive of hand-held bans, contending it remains unclear whether using hands-free devices reduces a driver's distraction more than the use of a hand-held device—a growing concern among policymakers and law enforcement officials.

A 2010 study by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety found little difference between drivers who used hand-held cellphones and those who used hands-free devices.

“There's no question that phone use behind the wheel is distracting,” institute spokesman Russ Rader said Wednesday. “But research indicates that hands-free phone use may be as distracting as hand-held phone use once the conversation begins.”

Among those municipalities that have adopted cellphone ordinances is Chicago, which enacted its ban in 2005. Evanston approved a hand-held cellphone ban for drivers in 2010.

Happy National Masturbation Month—or Maysturbation, as the sex toy industry so cleverly nicknamed it in 1995.

I realize I may be a little weird, but masturbation always has been a topic near and dear to my, er, heart.

I still remember the moment I learned all my friends masturbated too. A coed group of my high school friends were sitting in a coffee shop in Green Bay, Wis., pretending to be artsy when one of my guy friends brought up masturbation—probably attempting to be avant-garde. I was shocked at how quickly all my friends nodded in mutual appreciation for the sacred solo sex act.

I had thought it was just me! It was the same kind of epiphany moment I had when I was 4 and read “Everyone Poops.” Thanks to my indie friends, I learned masturbation was nothing to be ashamed of.

I credit masturbation not just with being an enjoyable, cheap and easy way to pass time during my teen years, but also for helping me delay sex until I was ready and mercifully sparing me from the whole terrible-first-time experience. Masturbation taught me what I liked so I could share that knowledge with my partners, even on the first go-round.

I realize this kind of epiphany was not the experience of most of my cohorts. We are the “American Pie” generation, and those raunchy movies taught us that boys do it whenever, wherever and with whatever pastries they can find—but only if they are losers who can’t have “real sex,” à la Jim Levenstein. Meanwhile, girls don’t masturbate or even think about orgasms unless they are dirty and kinky, like the weird band geek. Both stereotypes are filled with unnecessary shame.

Thanks to some serious misrepresentation in the media, masturbation remains one of the most underappreciated and underrepresented sex acts. For many women it still is taboo, while it has been unnecessarily stigmatized for men.

All of this is crazy. Not only is masturbation the only completely safe sex you can have (take that, abstinence-only education!) but it also is good for you: It releases endorphins and reduces stress!

Masturbation should not be a taboo topic left to Hollywood to fetishize and then slap with an R rating. It should be Chapter 1 in sex education in our schools. How can we expect kids to make smart sex choices if they don’t even know their own bodies?

With Steubenville and a number of other high-profile rape cases in high schools, we’ve seen that kids don’t understand and are not learning the concept of consent, nor do they seem to understand how sex is better when all parties are conscious and consenting.

Masturbation—and talking about masturbation—can teach kids ownership of their bodies. Sex is not just something to “give in to” or to “take” but, as cheesy as this sounds, something to explore with yourself without outside pressure.

Despite learning a lot of our early sex moves from Stifler, our generation is breaking down sexual taboos—from the increasing social acceptance of homosexuality to a push for comprehensive sex ed nationwide.

There are only two days left in Maysturbation. For the sake of our generation’s sexual revolution, you know what you’ve got to do.

Know your bike-share fees

Chicago Tribune

Membership enrollment opened Wednesday for Chicago's Divvy bicycle-sharing service, but cycling enthusiasts might think someone let the air out of biking's joie de vivre after reading the accompanying 17-page rental agreement and liability-waiver form.

In the months leading up to the June 14 launch of the service, city officials said the bike-share experiment was being designed for short trips lasting up to 30 minutes. The online posting Wednesday of the rental contract for those who become annual members of the service made it clear that exceeding 30 minutes on a three-speed Divvy bike will get expensive faster than most people can pedal.

The concept of the program is to provide a quick, inexpensive transportation option on the last mile or so of trips for commuters getting off CTA or Metra trains, as well as creating an alternative to riding taxis or buses during peak hours on traffic-clogged streets, officials said. A commuter could pick up a Divvy bike near Union Station, for instance, and drop it off at another bike-share station near his or her workplace.

If the bike is returned to a docking station 31 minutes to an hour after it was checked out, an extra $1.50 is charged to the credit card of the annual member. That's on top of the annual membership fee of $75 or $125, the latter of which includes five daily guest passes and a Divvy T-shirt.

The Divvy bike-sharing program is slated to launch June 14. NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

At 61 to 90 minutes, the late charge increases to $4.50, and it continues heading north after that.

The Divvy bike is the responsibility of the user while it's in his or her possession. The late charges increase to $1,200 for the replacement cost of the bike if it has gone missing for 24 hours, according to the rental agreement.

Once the bike is returned, only late fees would apply.

In addition to the $75 annual Divvy membership, which includes unlimited uses lasting up to 30 minutes each, 365 days a year, a $7 daily pass also will be offered once the service is in operation, officials said.

As for year-round usage, the contract stipulates that Divvy bikes cannot be operated "in poor or dangerous weather conditions, including snow."

The customer contract also lists "prohibited acts" while riding a Divvy bike. They include using a cellphone or portable music device, texting or being under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

THE TIME FRAME

The city and the Divvy contractor, Montreal-based Alta Bicycle Share Inc., plan to have 40 bike-share docking stations open for business June 14, when the city's Bike to Work Week rally will be held in the plaza of the Daley Center. More than 75 Divvy stations will be installed in June, 300 by the end of August and 400 neighborhood locations installed over the next year, according to the Chicago Department of Transportation.

CHICAGO VIOLENCE

ONE CITY UNDER THE GUN

Chicago Lawn saw a double homicide last week, Chicago's first in three months, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

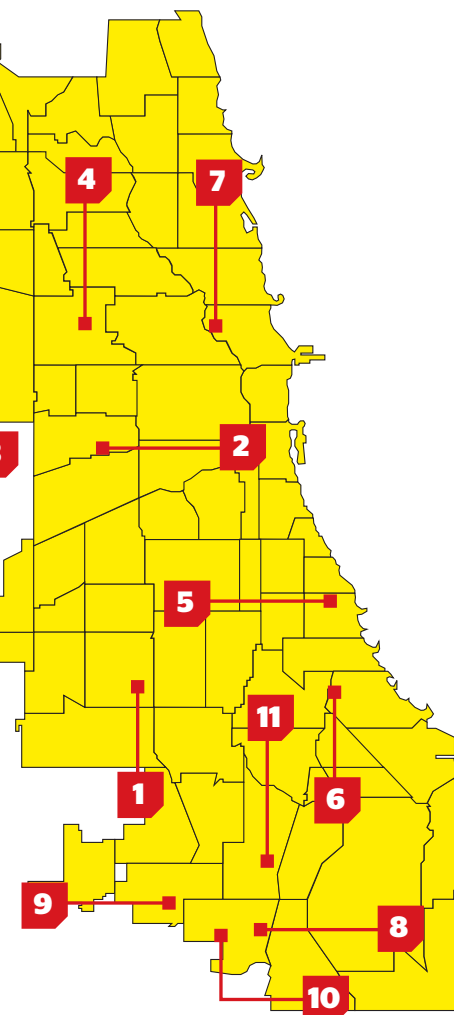

Two men, ages 30 and 22, were discovered fatally shot in the 7100 block of South Oakley Avenue on May 22, police said.

Chicago Lawn has logged three homicides so far this year. The Southwest Side community area recorded 22 homicides last year, RedEye determined.

The last double homicide was Feb. 20, when two women were shot to death in a Chatham apartment, according to police data.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were logged in the last week in Austin, Humboldt Park, Hyde Park, Morgan Park, the Near North Side, Roseland and South Shore, RedEye found.

West Pullman saw two homicides this week. A man was shot to death Wednesday in the 12200 block of South Halsted Street, police said. Three days earlier, a 27-year-old man was fatally shot in the 12100 block of South Indiana Avenue.

Meanwhile, a 35-year-old man was stabbed to death May 23 in the 1900 block of South Spaulding Avenue in North Lawndale, police said.

Thirty-eight homicides have been logged so far this month. Fifty-one homicides were recorded in May 2012, RedEye determined.

U.S. drone kills Pakistan Taliban No. 2

1 A U.S. drone strike killed the No. 2 of the Pakistani Taliban in the North Waziristan region Wednesday, three security officials said, in what would be a major blow in the fight against militancy. The drone strike killed seven people, Pakistani security officials said, including Taliban deputy commander Wali-ur-Rehman, who had been poised to succeed Hakimullah Mehsud as leader of the Pakistani Taliban.

Bachmann won't run for re-election in 2014

2 Rep. Michele Bachmann, a conservative sensation and briefly a Republican presidential front-runner, announced Wednesday that she won't seek re-election to her congressional seat in 2014. The four-term Minnesota lawmaker told supporters in an online video that it was not a reaction to federal inquiries into her campaign finances and activities.

Man charged in soldier's slaying

3 Michael Adebawale, 22, one of the two suspects in the deadly attack on U.K. soldier Lee Rigby, was charged Wednesday with murder and possession of a revolver. Rigby was hit with a car and attacked by two men with knives just after 2 p.m. May 22 outside a military barracks in Woolwich, southeast London.

Disney employee arrested after explosion

4 A 22-year-old Disneyland employee accused of exploding a so-called dry ice bomb in the park's Toontown is being held on bail of $1 million.

Ricin detected in letters to NYC mayor

5 Preliminary tests indicate ricin was found in letters sent this past weekend to New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg. New York deputy police commissioner Paul Browne said Wednesday.

THE DIGIT

2 That's how many students were injured at a Virginia high school after the school's floors were greased with baby oil in an apparent senior prank. The school was locked down for nearly three hours while the floors were cleaned.

Soldier will plead guilty in Afghan slayings trial

6 SEATTLE Army Staff Sgt. Robert Bales has agreed to plead guilty to the killing of 16 Afghan civilians who were shot to death in their homes outside a U.S. Army outpost in a violent rampage his lawyers have said was brought on by stress fueled with alcohol and drugs.

Bales, 39, will enter the plea Wednesday at Joint Base Lewis-McChord as part of an agreement in which the government will not seek the death penalty, according to his lawyer, John Henry Browne.

"I didn't think we'd be getting to this point, but if they take the death penalty off the table, we're able to work it out," Browne said.

The plea must be approved by the military court. Browne said the agreement called for Bales to admit to the killings essentially as charged and present a full accounting to the court of what happened on the night of March 11, 2012. Bales is accused of stealing into a series of residential compounds outside Camp Belambay in southern Afghanistan and slaughtering the people inside.

A full sentencing hearing will be held in September, during which a military jury panel will determine whether Bales, a father of two from Lake Tapps, Wash., should be entitled to future parole. A conviction of premeditated murder carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison.

Defense attorneys initially had considered mounting an insanity defense, but such cases are difficult to prove, especially in military court. Military legal analysts say there has never been a successful insanity defense in a military murder case.

CONFERENCE FINALS

THE HAT TRICK

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN
THE BLACKHAWKS WORLD

Rock on

Regardless of the outcome of the Hawks' season, the team felt no ill will toward the Rolling Stones, who practically took over the United Center before Game 7 on Wednesday. "We have our rooms, and they're not allowed in our dressing room," Duncan Keith said with a shrug. So who rocks harder: Mick Jagger or anthem singer Jim Cornellison?

THE DIGIT

2 So that's that. Starting next year, the Hawks and Red Wings will play just twice during the regular season. See ya in the Stanley Cup finals, Detroit—if you make it that far.

Thumbs up from Scottie

Bulls great Scottie Pippen was spotted by the NBC Sports cameras Wednesday wearing a Patrick Kane jersey at the United Center. His jersey size? We're guessing it's Extra Extra Extra Tall.

BLACKHAWKS VS. DETROIT

Blackhawks. Red Wings. Game 7. Chicago was beside itself with excitement Wednesday, which means there were two possible outcomes: Either Blackhawks Nation would be in hockey heaven, or suffer sports hell on Earth.

And late in the third period, the Hawks thought they had the game won. Alas, the refs ruled a fight—if you can call it that—along the boards warranted stopping play while Hawks defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson was busy scoring. Here's how the showdown unfolded, with those mood swings in mind. REDEYE

SCOTT STRAZZANTE/TRIBUNE

FIRST PERIOD

Heavenly: Andrew Shaw goes after Wings captain Henrik Zetterberg, smacking him with his stick and igniting a shoving match near the Detroit bench. Think these guys really want this game?

Hellish: The first dumb penalty of the game goes to ... Duncan Keith, who gets sent off for tripping. Not a good risk, Duncs, considering the Wings were in no danger of scoring. #useyourhead

Heavenly: The Hawks' Viktor Stalberg and the Wings' Dan Cleary exchange glove sizes after a whistle near the end of the period. You don't talk bad about a hockey player's momma!

Heavenly: Shaw spins behind the goal for a stuff attempt, but Wings goalie Jimmy Howard shuts the door at the far post. Love how aggressive this "little" guy is. Good things have to be around the corner.

Score: Blackhawks 0, Red Wings 0

SECOND PERIOD

Heavenly: GOAL! Patrick Sharp finishes off a three-on-one break with his seventh goal of the playoffs. Howard has no chance, and the Wings might feel that way right now, too.

Hellish: Hawks defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson takes a shot to the jaw and is shaken up. Fortunately, he doesn't miss a shift. Yep, he's a hockey player all right.

Heavenly: Wings forward Cory Emmerton has Crawford dead to rights just a few feet from the goal. But the Hawks netminder makes a terrific stop, and fans can breathe again.

Hellish: Patrick Kane has a wide open net on a pass from Jonathan Toews, but a sliding Niklas Kronwall negates the chance. How many bullets—er, pucks—can the Wings dodge?

Score: Blackhawks 1, Red Wings 0

THE STARTING LINE

» Infielder Gordon Beckham (injured hand) won't rejoin White Sox until June 6 at the earliest » Fire defender Arne Friedrich headed to Germany for hip treatment

DEAD WINGS

OVERTIME

Heavenly: GOAL! Brent Seabrook ends it with a wrist shot past Howard. Bring on the L.A. Kings!

Final score: Blackhawks 2, Red Wings 1

THIRD PERIOD

Hellish: [Bleep.] Zetterberg buries one in a wide-open net. Game tied. This ain't gonna be easy after all.

Heavenly: Sharp comes oh-so-close to breaking the tie, splitting the defense before Howard denies him. Must. Cash. In.

Hellish: Zetterberg holds the puck in the Hawks' zone for what seems like an eternity. Ya gotta make him pay for that. #bickellsmash

Hellish: You've got to be kidding. The Hawks have a Niklas Hjalmarsson goal wiped out by a pair of coinciding penalties, and we've got overtime. Great. (Note sarcasm here.)

Score: Blackhawks 1, Red Wings 1

1	How could the Cubs and Sox draw attention from the Blackhawks?	Collaborate on an 18-person choreographed dance. Which people will watch after the Hawks game.	Play in drag.	Put ice over the field and give them hockey sticks.	Can I answer this in, like, two years? #missionimpossible	Can't. Don't try. Crosstown Classic canceled.
2	How can you tell Ozzie Guillen is back in Chicago?	WHAT? SOME OBNOXIOUS LOUDMOUTH IS MAKING IT IMPOSSIBLE TO HEAR ANYTHING ELSE.	Flash Tacos in Bucktown have never tasted so good.	Oh, was that the burst of hot air I felt?	The errors have returned to the South Side.	Copies of his resume fill trash cans across the city.
3	What did we learn from the Cubs' video board mock-ups this week?	I don't know what that means. They should focus on baseball, not graphic design.	That Kim Kardashian's booty would actually fit the screen.	More people cared about that than the Crosstown Classic.	There are multiple ways to make "Go Cubs Go" more irritating.	Someone on a rooftop will get an amazing view of the back of the scoreboard.
4	LeBron James thinks flopping is an effective strategy. Discuss.	I thought he said he didn't need to flop? Now he's a pro-flop flip-flopper.	As in belly flopping. A strategy to win the next season of "Splash."	He should be the new coach of the Vancouver Canucks.	That's his line from the new Uncle Drew campaign, when he joins the team. #theflopperreturns	Well actually ... Ouch! I just hurt my hand! No, seriously. Not a flop.
5	If the NFL can hold the draft in May ...	... CTA buses can always stop at their designated stops. That's not too much to ask regardless of what the NFL does.	... then we can wear white at least a month after Labor Day.	... I can ignore it even more by watching the Stanley Cup playoffs.	... then the Pro Bowl can be held after Week 9. Yep, that doesn't make sense either.	... preseason can start in July. Remind me again why football season doesn't last all year?

Dioner Navarro
PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Who's a backup now?

Navarro's 3 homers catapult Cubs past Sox

Chicago Tribune

Dioner Navarro was asked if he ever before had been beckoned to receive a curtain call at the top of the dugout steps from the fans.

"I think I had one," the Cubs backup catcher said initially as his voice trailed off. When asked to name that other occasion, Navarro reconsidered. "No, this is the only one."

In his dreams, perhaps Navarro was recalling the kind of game he had at the plate in the Cubs' 9-3 rout of the White Sox at Wrigley Field. Navarro's three-home run, six-RBI day is any baseball player's dream come true.

The Cubs have put the higher-achieving White Sox in their place twice this week, blanking them 7-0 on Monday.

Scott Feldman (5-4) went six innings to earn the win for the Cubs. John Danks (0-1) took the loss.

"I obviously wasn't as sharp as I'd like to be, but you make some mistakes to big league hitters and they do what they're supposed to do.

You tip your cap to Dioner and the team, but especially Navarro. He had a big game. Hats off to him," said Danks, who was charged with four runs on five hits in four innings. He gave up two of Navarro's three homers.

"Those were two pitches I'd love to have [back]," Danks said. "But more than that, my fastball command wasn't anywhere near where I'd like it to be. I'm going to chalk it up to one of those days, I hope so at least."

The Cubs collected 11 hits as four other Sox relievers struggled to quiet their bats.

"[Danks] wasn't the only one," Sox manager Robin Ventura said. "It was one of those where we have to find a way to keep their catchers from hitting home runs. Not a good day, but it's just one of those that you have to stick with it and find a way to keep them in the yard."

Navarro became the first Cubs catcher to hit three home runs since George Mitterwald on April 17, 1974, against the Pirates. The last Cubs player to take three deep was Aramis Ramirez on July 20, 2010, against Houston.

"I don't hit many homers, but the ones I hit, it feels great," Navarro said. "It's a great feeling."

THE MOUTHWATCH
I went all out; I have no regrets."

—Cubs reliever Kyuji Fujikawa, who will undergo Tommy John surgery on his right elbow and be sidelined for the rest of the 2013 season. Fujikawa is in the first year of a two-year, $9.5 million deal.

Stars: They're just like us

Tom Cruise and David Beckham were spotted sitting next to each other at Game 7 between the L.A. Kings and San Jose Sharks. Here's a portion of their (imagined) conversation:

Cruise: "You seen those Blackhawks? They would be tough in the next round."

Beckham: "I bloody well hope we don't play them. Patrick Sharp is the only man who could steal Victoria from me."

What big cans you have!

Shaquille O'Neal (@SHAQ) is in the beverage business. He tweeted a photo of his new soda line Wednesday. According to BevNet.com, the Soda Shaq cream sodas will come in 23.5-ounce cans, and you can choose between strawberry, orange, vanilla and blueberry.

25 SHOWS TO CATCH THIS MONTH

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

While some concert action shifts to outdoor venues with the arrival of June's warmer temperatures (the Divine Fits at Taste of Randolph, Jason Isbell at Ribfest, Ke$ha at First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre and so on), the club scene still boasts must-see shows from explosive garage-rockers (Mikal Cronin, Japandroids), world music acts (Bombino, Amadou & Mariam) and an actor who takes a surprisingly serious approach to his music (John Reilly & Friends). Here are the month's 25 best shows.

19 Fitz & the Tantrums
June 18 at Metro

JUNE SWOON

GUIDE

1 Twin Shadow June 1 at Metro
On his 2012 album "Confess," Twin Shadow mastermind George Lewis Jr. does precisely that, turning out big, melodramatic ballads that could have been torn from the pages of his diary.

2 Calexico June 2 and 3 at City Winery
After perfecting a distinctly Southwestern sound over more than two decades together, the Tucson duo ventured to New Orleans to record its 2012 album "Algiers."

3 Nightlands June 4 at Schubas
On "Oak Island," his second mixtape under the Nightlands banner, War on Drugs' Dave Hartley explores the kind of lush, downtempo electronica one could imagine turning up on Marvin the Paranoid Android's iPod.

4 Baths June 7 at Metro
Baths' Will Wiesenfeld bares his soul on "Cerulean," laying down dense, electro-steeped tunes that reveal both his playful (the childlike "Animals") and more introspective sides (the sad, scarred "Plea").

5 The Uncluded June 8 at Old Town School of Folk Music
At first glance, Aesop Rock and Kimya Dawson seem like a mismatched pair. While freak-folkie Dawson is known for her childlike approach, rapper Rock often channels a verbally adept grad student with his wordy diatribes. Even so, the two complement each other perfectly on their debut, with Dawson offering a cheery counterpoint to Rock's comparatively bleak worldview.

6 Jason Isbell June 8 at Ribfest
The former Drive-By Truckers comes fully into his own on his thoughtful new album "Southeastern," a mature effort awash in country- and southern-soul-steeped songs that sound like they were lived rather than merely written.

7 Ke$ha June 9 at First Midwest Bank Amphitheatre
Ke$ha's musical output could double as an alternate soundtrack to Harmony Korine's "Spring Breakers." Her songs tend to be a debauched, Girl-Gone-Wild take on life, filled with late nights, countless drinks and only the occasional regret.

8 Bombino June 9 at Martyrs'
Tuareg guitarist Omara "Bombino" Moctar is a constant revelation on his explosive new album "Nomad."

9 Glen Hansard June 9 at Metro
The Irish singer-songwriter, who briefly flirted with mainstream success with his starring role and musical contributions to the film "Once," fronted two celebrated bands (The Frames, Swell Season) before finally setting out on his own with his 2012 solo debut "Rhythm and Repose."

The-Dream expands music parameters

Los Angeles Times

The most decorated space in The-Dream's Newport Beach, Calif., pied-a-terre is the master bedroom—no surprise, perhaps, for the R&B star behind such sex-obsessed slow jams as “Love King” and “Sweat It Out,” the latter of which finds him helpfully advising a lady friend, “Girl, call Latisha, your beautician / ‘Cause your hair is gon’ need fixin’.”

Yet during a recent visit to the minimally furnished crash pad—where the Atlanta-based singer-songwriter-producer sleeps when work brings him to the West Coast—it wasn't erotic paraphernalia that filled the bedroom but recording equipment: keyboards, microphones and computers, as well as a large whiteboard with song titles scrawled on it. This was where The-Dream and Kelly Rowland were finishing work on her single “Dirty Laundry” not long before the two artists were to begin a joint tour May 23. (Last week, most of the tour's dates were canceled after Rowland signed on as a judge for the next season of “The X Factor.”)

It was also where The-Dream was overseeing final mixes for his new solo album, “IV Play,” released Tuesday.

Dressed in jeans and a tank top, a Falcons cap pulled low over his eyes, the 35-year-old born Terius Nash mouthed along to the lyrics of his song “Too Early” as it boomed through a set of speakers.

A mournful electro-blues cut with guitar by Gary Clark Jr., “Too Early” is something of a departure for The-Dream, who in addition to his own music has helped craft sparkly smash hits for stars such as Beyonce (“Single Ladies (Put a Ring on It)”) and Rihanna (“Umbrella”).

Last year, a handful of adventurous young R&B performers—including Frank Ocean, Miguel and the Weeknd—earned widespread acclaim for expanding the parameters of mainstream soul music. But all of them were following an example set by The-Dream, who was demonstrating how creative and commercial ambitions might coexist as far back as 2007.

“I pride myself on not making the same record twice,” he said.

Part of his determination to keep pushing, he added, stems from his desire to maintain the influence he's had on R&B. “You gotta come up with something else that people are trying to copy,” he said

More important, he wants his music to reflect a realistic variety of emotions and happenings: the lush bedroom fantasies along with the fights that threaten to undo a relationship; the humble satisfaction of a family man as well as the entitled petulance of a celebrity.

Few singers embody those conflicting impulses more convincingly than The-Dream, an ability to adapt that also helps explain why he's become such a go-to songwriter for women.

“It's point of view, point of view, point of view,” he said, describing the way he thinks his albums work. “It's like going different places in the world. You wake up and there are different rules, different ways to play life. You grow up in the 'hood, there's a certain way you go to your car—you look over your shoulder a little bit.”

Mireille Enos and Joel Kinnaman star in AMC's "The Killing."

'The Killing' rises from the dead

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES AMC's "The Killing," about the grisly murder of young Rosie Larsen, was pronounced dead at the end of a troubled two-season run that included declining ratings amid a revolt by once-supportive critics and fans over what they perceived to be the failed promise to end the first season by revealing the identity of the killer.

But despite its cancellation, "The Killing" did not rest in peace.

The faithful, including some network executives and creator/executive producer Veena Sud, always held out a glimmer of hope that the series, which earned high praise for its moody tension and the performance of leads Mireille Enos and Joel Kinnaman, might somehow be resurrected.

Now, almost a year after its "series finale," "The Killing" has risen and will be back for a third season beginning Sunday, with Enos, Kinnaman and Sud on board.

The story picks up more than a year after the close of the Larsen investigation. Troubled Seattle homicide detective Sarah Linden (Enos) has quit the force and is trying to put her life back together, while former partner Stephen Holder (Kinnaman) has risen in the ranks and become a respected investigator.

A new mystery brings the pair back together: Holder's search for a runaway girl who has become part of a band of wayward teens living by their wits on the streets of Seattle. The hunt leads to the gruesome discovery of murders apparently connected to a previous case headed up by Linden. When Holder seeks Linden's help, she is reluctantly drawn back into her former life.

"I feel blessed and so lucky," Sud said in a telephone interview. "This season represents an incredible opportunity to continue to tell the story of these great characters. I'm very grateful."

Still, the series and AMC face uncertainty: Will enough viewers who abandoned the series be enticed by a new mystery to return? The ratings fell off noticeably during the progression of the second season.

AMC President Charlie Collier said the controversy surrounding "The Killing" put network executives in a tough spot, and that canceling the show was "very difficult."

"Mixed emotions came with that decision," Collier said. "It was made based on different inputs and competing needs. But when it came down to it, we just couldn't shake these characters. We were passionate about the storytelling, passionate about the show, and we kept hearing from the core passionate audience. Now we have a new case, with all our MVPs back. With a new case brings new opportunity."

Amazon picks its first original TV series

Reuters

Amazon will make five original TV series, including “Alpha House” with John Goodman, the company announced Wednesday.

After getting viewer feedback on 14 pilots filmed earlier this year, the world’s largest Internet retailer chose the political satire “Alpha House;” “Betas,” a comedy about four tech entrepreneurs; “Annebots,” a kids’ show about robots; “Creative Galaxy,” an animated art adventure series; and “Tumbleleaf,” another kids’ show about a small blue fox named Fig.

These are the first TV series ever made by Amazon. They represent a major foray for the company into original programming delivered over the Internet, stepping up competition with Netflix and Hulu.

The new series will be shown exclusively on Amazon’s Prime Instant Video service later this year and early next year, the company said. Prime Instant Video is free for members of Amazon’s Prime service, which offers two-day shipping and other benefits in the U.S. for $79 a year.

Amazon posted all 14 TV pilots online for anyone to watch in April and encouraged viewers to give feedback. The company analyzed the reviews and other data, such as how long people watched, to try to pick shows that are more likely to do well as full series.

“We’re thrilled to have emerged safely from this harrowing exercise in online democracy,” said Garry Trudeau, the Pulitzer-Prize winning cartoonist who created and wrote “Alpha House.”

Amazon will shoot 12 more episodes of “Alpha House” to complete the first season, which will air starting in November, Trudeau said.

Pilots that were not picked up as full series included “Zombieland,” a comedy based on the successful movie of the same name, and “Browsers,” a musical comedy starring Bebe Neuwirth.

Rhett Reese, the writer and producer of “Zombieland,” blamed viewer feedback for the TV show’s demise.

“I’ll never understand the vehement hate the pilot received from die-hard ‘Zombieland’ fans,” he wrote on Twitter. “You guys successfully hated it out of existence.”

The other pilots that did not make it were: “Dark Minions,” “Onion News Empire,” “Supanatural,” “Those Who Can’t,” “Positively Obitively,” “Sara Solves It” and “Teen Tiny Dogs.”

Sour beers are becoming more experimental, like this smoky Sauer Power brewed by Jester King in collaboration with Germany's Freigeist.

BRITTANY SOWACKE/REDEYE

FYI

Keep an eye out for sour beers from two Chicago breweries. Off Color Brewing's geuze, Troublesome, will be on tap soon at bars such as Map Room, Hopleaf and Big Star, while Goose Island's peach sour, Halia, will be released in October.

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

Sour beers are a prime example of the “sounds weird, tastes awesome” phenomenon. It’s no brewing mistake—these beers are intended to taste tart or acidic, a flavor they owe to the wild yeast or bacteria used in the brewing process. The science is complicated, but the results are some of the most interesting and refreshing beers on the market. And they’re not just for beer geeks anymore; they’re on tap and on shelves around the city, if you know where to look. With more Chicago-area breweries jumping on the sour bandwagon, now’s the right time to try this sought-after style. Here are some expert tips for sour skeptics.

BELIEVE THE
BEERS ARE WORTH A SIP

1 Try them with food.

At West Loop restaurant The Publican, beer director Michael McAvena has been blending his own lambic doux—a Belgian style of sour beer—for years, and he also presides over a beer list that spotlights other sour styles. Still, they're not always an easy sell. "The easiest way to present it is with food in a pairing that highlights the beer," McAvena said. "Flemish sours are amazing food beers because they are sweet and sour and they go with almost anything. I think the Flemish sours are a good way to start because they're not as jarring." McAvena recommends a Monk's Cafe Flemish sour ale with The Publican's charcuterie plate, or a lambic alongside oysters.

2 Seek out a deal.

At Binny's locations, assistant beer buyer Kyle Fornek has seen an increased interest in sour styles over the past few years, though he says it remains a niche market in part due to the beers' sometimes high prices. "There's not that many breweries that make [sour beers] and a lot of them are really expensive, too, around $20 to $30 a bottle," Fornek said. He cites Chicago-based brewery Pipeworks' three Berliner weisse beers as popular, as well as sour styles from Placentia, Calif.'s The Bruery. But if you're looking for a deal, he suggests Belgian bottles such as Brouwerij Bavik's Petrus Oud Bruin and Brouwerij Rodenbach's Grand Cru, which can retail for around $8-$10.

3 Flip your expectations.

Sours definitely don't taste like the pale ales, pilsners and lagers most people are used to. Matt Potts, CEO and brewmaster at Normal, Ill.'s Destihl Brewery, tries to prepare newcomers for his Saint Dekkera line of sour beers by explaining what they can expect before they sip. "I will often first ask if they like sour candy like Shock Tarts to prepare their palates before tasting our sours," Potts said. "I have known Miller drinkers that became hooked on sours in one night. It's hard to get a bigger and quicker conversion than that." He adds that wine drinkers often love his sours, too, because the Saint Dekkera beers have a refreshing, light body. And if the first taste is too surprising? "I'll generally ask people to try at least three sips of it in case the first sip is too shocking."

4 Know what style to look for.

Sour is a category of beer that includes many more specific styles (see sidebar). Each has its own flavors, from fruity sweetness to vinegar dryness. Sample a few until you find the one that suits your taste, then keep an eye out for it on menus and store shelves. "Saying a beer is a sour beer is similar to saying a beer is a hoppy beer. There is so much else that can go into it," said Tom Korder, a brewer at Penrose, a brewery that plans to open in west suburban Geneva, Ill. in the late summer or early fall with a focus on sour beers. "That's why usually I clarify it even further: There's lambics, Berliner weisses, gooses, all with their own characteristics."

THE SOUR RAINBOW

Sour is an umbrella category that, according to beer judging criteria, includes the following styles:

BERLINER WEISSE: A German style of pale wheat ale with tart flavors

FLANDERS RED ALE: An aged Belgian-style beer with red wine-like flavors

1 FLANDERS BROWN ALE/ OUD BRUIN: An aged Belgian-style brown ale with malty and fruity flavors

STRAIGHT (UNBLENDED) LAMBICS: A less common style of lambics that is complex, sour and uncarbonated

2 GEUZE: A balanced blend of one-, two- and three-year aged lambics with light carbonation

3 FRUIT LAMBIC: Often a blend of multi-year lambics, but with the addition of fruit such as cherries, peaches, raspberries or grapes

Bull's Eye french toast ($16) at Little Goat Diner
820 W. Randolph St. 312-868-3455

Nothing like a nice little breakfast classic—or a mega-indulgent spin on one. At Stephanie Izard's more-than-a-diner diner, French toast means eggs cooked inside and crispy chicken popped on top. Trust me: Two pieces of this sweet onion brioche wonder is plenty. —MATT PAIS

Butter cookies ($9.95 per dozen) at Leadbelly

After stuffing your face with one of the indulgent burgers at this Portage Park shop, chances are you won't have a lot of room left for cookies. But don't make the mistake of overlooking the house-made butter cookie, a thin, shortbread-like beauty that's drizzled with both milk and white chocolate and sprinkled with crushed pecans. If you bring home a jar stacked with a dozen, you'll be amazed how fast they disappear. —LISA ARNETT

Sour Patch Margarita ($8) at Parson's Chicken & Fish
2952 W. Armitage Ave.
773-384-3333

If I order a margarita, I usually know what I'm in for: a boozy mountain of machine-churned, lime-flavored ice and a hangover for a solid day afterward. Sitting on Parson's summery patio with a rocks glass filled with a mixture of tart orange and lime juices, agave nectar and mezcal is a refreshing change from the usual spring break bar experience. It's not too grown up, though; the bartender runs a Sour Patch Kids candy around the rim and dips the glass into sour sugar first, making for a serious pucker upon first sip. —ELITE TRUONG

Headquarters Beercade
HILARY HIGGINS/REDEYE

Beercade gets bigger

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

A few brief moments after the doors opened for the first time at Headquarters Beercade's new pinball expansion, Michael Messaros strolled over to a brightly colored "Tales From the Crypt" game. He quickly was absorbed in the process of tapping two red buttons on either side of the glowing machine to launch a silver ball up a series of ramps and bumpers toward the Crypt Keeper's ghoulish face.

"It's great," said Messaros, 36, of Wicker Park. "I really like the physicality of it. It's not like a video game, where it's just a series of ones and zeroes. Everything that's happening is real."

For pinball enthusiasts, it's hard to believe the renaissance on the local scene is real. Over the past three years, tables have popped up at Emporium Arcade Bar in Wicker Park, the record store/arcade museum Logan Hardware in Logan Square and Bottom Lounge in the West Loop. But when it comes to public play in the city of Chicago, one of pinball's biggest moments in decades arrived last week. The year-old beercade in Lakeview remodeled the old Uncle Fatty's Rum Resort space and filled the 7,000-square-foot facility with 20 tables, making it the biggest collection of machines in Chicago and one of the largest pinball palaces in the Midwest. According to pinside.com, there now are more than 70 pinball tables available for play in the city.

"It's a thrill," said Gary Stern, CEO of Stern Pinball in Melrose Park, the Chicago-area company that was until recently the last pinball manufacturer in the world. It has partnered with Headquarters to provide some of its popular new machines such as "The Avengers" and "X-Men" to the beercade. "Chicago has always been the pinball capital of the world. My father started making games in 1947, and they were all in Chicago. Just as Detroit is the home of the automobile, this is the headquarters of the world for pinball."

Part of the reason the owners of Headquarters decided to expand with pinball instead of more arcade games was the popularity of the two machines in the original bar.

"Pinball got a lot of action," Headquarters Beercade co-owner Mark Kwiatkowski said. "So when we realized there were no pinball parlors in this market we thought, 'What a great opportunity and an extension of our brand.'"

For a lot of people discovering pinball for the first time, part of the appeal is getting away from a smartphone, according to Stern's director of marketing Jody Dankberg.

"You can text or check your email pretty much everywhere; you can even do that while you're driving," Dankberg said. "But this is something you have to pay attention to and keep your phone in your pocket."

Messaros has a simpler reason for the appeal of Headquarters. "What's better than playing pinball and drinking beer? It's a great idea; I can't believe no one thought of it earlier."

5 skin
products worth trying

INGREDIENTS TO AVOID

David Pollock, a beauty industry executive and chemist who advocates for safe beauty (justaskdavid.com) and has his own line of natural skin care products called PUR attitude, advises consumers to stay away from these potentially harmful ingredients commonly found in skin care products:

- » Parabens
- » Polyethylene glycol (PEG) and propylene glycol
- » Lauryl/laureth sulfates
- » Petrochemicals (petrolatum, light liquid paraffin, petroleum distillate, mineral jelly, petroleum jelly)
- » Synthetic fragrance
- » Synthetic dyes
- » Triethanolamine (TEA)

Products' promises are only skin-deep

Chicago Tribune

Despite your good intentions, buying skin care products labeled “organic” or “natural” doesn’t always translate to a healthier body or planet.

Many such products still contain the chemicals you’re trying to avoid. And even if a product is bursting with nature’s bounty, those earthy ingredients may not produce the desired results.

How can you know which earth-friendly products are best for your skin, inside and out?

The first step is to look past the marketing. Terms like “natural” and “all natural” have no legal definitions and therefore are unreliable indicators of a product’s content. The term “organic” is regulated but can sometimes be misleading.

A product bearing the USDA Organic seal must contain at least 95 percent certified organic ingredients (excluding water and salt). Products labeled “made with organic ingredients” must contain at least 70 percent USDA-certified organically produced ingredients.

Anything else isn’t supposed to carry the term organic anywhere on the display panel, but that rule is rarely enforced for skin care products as long as they don’t carry the USDA seal or “made with” label, said Alexis Baden-Mayer, political director of the Organic Consumers Association.

“You could put anything in your product, call it organic, and the USDA won’t do anything about it,” she said.

Also, a brand can have the word “organic” in its trademark without containing any organic ingredients.

Rather than trust the marketing, research the ingredients.

The nonprofit Environmental Working Group manages a cosmetics database called Skin Deep (ewg.org/skindeep) in which it evaluates the health risk of more than 62,000 products, one ingredient at a time, and lists the most common harmful contaminants to avoid.

But just because an ingredient is low-risk doesn’t mean it will be effective.

Leslie Baumann, founder of the University of Miami Cosmetic Medicine and Research Institute, advises that consumers first find out their skin type so they can seek ingredients that are best for their skin. (You can take a free questionnaire on her site, skintypesolutions.com.)

Just because something is natural doesn’t mean it is risk-free, and just because it sounds good doesn’t mean it is. Many products proclaim themselves “paraben-free” but may contain other preservatives that are more harmful or that we know less about, Baumann said.

11th Annual Chicago Turkish Festival kicks off with a black tie optional Opening Gala under the auspices of the Consulate General of the Republic of Turkey on Thursday, May 30, 7:00-10:00 pm at Pioneer Court

The gala will feature cultural performances, music by Simavi and the Chicago Jazz Quartet, Turkish food, wine, a silent auction and private preview of festival booths. The Turkish American community partners with the United Mitochondrial Disease Foundation and invites you to join in raising awareness and funds to support Mitochondrial Disease research. There will be a silent auction during the Gala to support UMDF and Turkish Airlines will give away two business class tickets to support fundraising efforts. Among the auction items is a Business Class trip to Turkey for two combined with a week-long vacation in Cappadocia...

The Chicago Turkish Festival is the first ever cultural festival at this historic location at the heart of the Magnificent Mile. The event runs May 31 through June 1, from 10:00 am until 9:00 pm daily, features cultural performances, whirling dervishes, fashion show, music, Turkish cuisine, beer, Maras ice-cream, Turkish coffee. Also vising is the Province of Nevşehir which is home to one of the most popular touristic destinations in the world, Cappadocia, with its history dating back to 2000 BC. Admission is free.

Meet the manly gifts of the 'Broquet' site

Los Angeles Times

Just in time for Father's Day, flower deliveries and edible arrangements have met their manly match in Broquet (pronounced bro-kay) a new company that will deliver a curated bucket of grilling tools, a cigar box of shaving products or a first-aid kit full of hangover helpers to dad's—or any dude's—doorstep.

The 6-month-old San Francisco-based Web retailer was born after Dan Hockenmaier came up empty while trying to find an appropriate gift to send to his friend Max Solomon.

"He was on the East Coast for his grandfather's funeral, and I was on a business trip in Salt Lake City sitting in my hotel room thinking: 'I've got to send him something,'" Hockenmaier said. "I was looking online and all I could find were these kind of cheesy gift baskets. ... So I ended up not sending anything at all—and feeling bad about it."

After returning to San Francisco, the two friends started talking about the lack of options in the gift-basket-for-guys category, a conversation that resulted in Broquet—of which Hockenmaier and Solomon are co-founders. Their gift baskets run from $39 to $127 at broquet.co.

The Pioneer basket, for example, includes a Parker straight razor and badger-bristle shaving brush, Shark blades and a whiskey after shave from Portland General Store packaged in a reclaimed cigar box ($88), while the Woodsman ($78) consists of a Gerber ax, Wells Lamont work gloves and 50 feet of nylon rope in a Kodiak log carrier.

There also are toolkits to make old fashioned (the Gentleman and Scholar, $69), galvanized buckets full of California-themed grill supplies (the Bonfire, $56), bacon six ways (the Smokehouse, $49) as well as the option of having the Broquet boys create a custom assortment.

While delivery dates depend on shipping method, Hockenmaier says non-custom orders placed by June 7 will make it to dear old dad's doorstep (providing that doorstep is here in the U.S.) in time for Father's Day.

1 “We’d be making out on the street at 2 in the morning, and we’d look up and there’d be a giant coyote staring at us.”

2 “You’re a joke. You’re not even a man anymore. Oh, and by the way, last night I faked four out of the seven.”

3 “When people get too chummy with me, I like to call them by the wrong name to let them know I don’t really care about them.”

4 “We were a little south of it, if you catch my meaning. We were a little closer to the Tenderloin.”

5 “I have to try to pretend like I’m not crying because there are other people there.”

6 “I’m a simple man. I like pretty, dark-haired women and breakfast food.”

7 “That’s how we had our dinner, and he didn’t spill anything on the bib of his overalls. They were safe.”

8 “If I’d had a park like that growing up, I probably wouldn’t have gone through such a prolonged mall-slut phase.”

9 “Sort of an explosion in the Hollywood Hills that evening.”

10 “And by ‘lunch’ I mean ‘anal sex.’”

11 “Are you going to tell a man he can’t fart in his own car?”

12 “One rage every three months is permitted. Try not to hurt anyone who doesn’t deserve it.”

Nick Offerman and Megan Mullally continue their quest to become couple of the decade

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Now that Amy Poehler and Will Arnett are waaaaay out of the picture, America’s next power couple has emerged. No, it’s not the Obamas—Nick Offerman and Megan Mullally hold the title, at least where humor is concerned. The two co-star in “The Kings of Summer,” out June 7, and they play hilariously rivalrous exes Ron Swanson and Tammy 2 on “Parks and Recreation.” In fact, they’re so ridiculous that we bet you can’t tell which of these quotes came from their “Parks and Rec” characters, and which came from a real-life interview with Vulture. But have fun trying! DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA; GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

ANSWER KEY 1 Nick Offerman, on one of the couple’s early dates; 2 Tammy 2; 3 Ron Swanson; 4 Nick Offerman; 5 Megan Mullally, on how awesome their relationship is; 6 Ron Swanson; 7 Megan Mullally, on the couple’s first date; 8 Tammy 2; 9 Nick Offerman; 10 Megan Mullally; 11 Ron Swanson; 12 Ron Swanson

Meet Beatrice.

She's a 24-year-old student of Italian and German descent born in New York and raised in California. She is currently earning a Master's Degree in Performance Studies at TISCH School of the Arts at NYU. Named after a character from the book Dante's Inferno, Beatrice enjoys a good game of pool, painting, playing the violin and coming up with ideas for graphic novels.

THE DIGIT

That's how many major awards ceremonies Neil Patrick Harris will host this year after the Emmys announced Wednesday that he will MC on Sept. 22. NPH already had been announced as the June 9 host of the Tony Awards.

You don't deserve the Oscar. I've been watching your acting now, and it's not good enough."

Scent of a woman

Taylor Swift is becoming, like, so mature. Her new fragrance, Taylor by Taylor Swift, is "more about my own style, classic, yet modern," she told People, and comes with a pearl necklace, something Swift says is "the one fashion accessory that never seems to go out of style."

Fighting words

Adam Levine set off a Twitter frenzy Tuesday when he muttered—under his breath, but still into a live microphone—"I hate this country" after two of his three singers were eliminated from the "The Voice." Levine responded by tweeting dictionary definitions of the words "joke," "humorless," "light-hearted" and "misunderstand" in efforts to deflect the criticism.

Summer of Neff

"Raising Hope" star and Chicago native Lucas Neff doesn't know how to relax. Last summer, he saw the first theatrical staging of a play he wrote. This summer, he's producing an indie film called "Lay in Wait" about a woman who loses her wedding ring—and herself—as she's caught between her husband and her lover. It's not a comedy, but Neff recorded a hilarious video to promote the film and the Kickstarter campaign to finance it. Check it out at layinwait.com.

Totally 'Random'

Daft Punk still rocks. Boosted by 221,000 digital downloads, the band's new album debuted at No. 1 this week on the Billboard 200. "Random Access Memories" racked up the second-best sales week of the year, billboard.com reports, trailing only Justin Timberlake's "The 20/20 Experience."
